

HERBERT HOOVER AND DR. WILBUR QUESTS OF HONOR

Leland Stanford Alumni
Give Banquet at the Country Club.

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford, Jr. University, and Herbert Hoover were the special guests at a banquet in their honor given at the Leland Stanford Alumni Country Club by the Stanford University Alumni Association.

The speakers were Secretary Hoover, President Wilbur, and Dean James E. Vernon Kellogg, who returned from an investigation of famine conditions in Russia.

Dr. Wilbur told of the scheme of advancing funds to students on their personal notes without interest, the principal to be repaid within ten years of graduation.

Secretary Hoover, as trustee of the university and a member of its first graduating class, gave a report of the healthy financial condition of the institution, its new buildings and new stadium. This built on a purely of earth and at a cost of $200,000, he declared to be probably the best and at the same time the least expensive in America.

Miss Harlan James, as the only woman speaker on the program raised the question of what could be done to remove the entrance limit allowing but 500 women to attend Stanford.

Tells of Russian Famine.
Dr. Vernon Kellogg, present head of the National Research Council and an associate of Hoover in Belgium food relief, briefly characterized his experiences in Russia and the tragedy that has overwhelmed that country as so terrible as to be beyond words to describe.

New officers of the association were elected as follows: Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, president; Miss Harlan James, vice president; E. N. Smith, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, secretary.

At the close the guests were introduced, including President W. W. Guth, of Goucher College, Baltimore; Col. W. B. Gray, United States forester; Representatives Philip D. Swing and Clarence Lea, of California, and Representative Carl Hayden, of Arizona; Prof. and Mrs. C. J. Ferguson, of Maryland University.

CHICAGO, October 29. Rev. Davis E. K. Byrne, who has waged an eight-year fight for property valued at millions in Florida, will leave in a few days to acquire title and announce he will use the funds to establish a home for girls.

The story dates back to 1906, when the late Mrs. Lillian Byrne, his right name of Davis S. Kidd, rescued Lucy Lillian Byrne, daughter of Wellington K. Byrne, owner of vast estates in Florida, from the slums of Chicago and returned her to her parents in Baltimore.

Out of gratitude, to the rescuer of his daughter, Wellington K. Byrne bequeathed $450,000 to Rev. Davis Kidd, with the sole condition that he change his name to Byrne, which was done. Before his death, Wellington K. Byrne made Rev. Davis E. K. Byrne his sole heir.

Books in Trunk Not at all Dry Detectives Find

When It Leaks Out, Seizure and Arrest Follow.

"Books" which leaked led police yesterday to investigate the contents of a trunk in the Union Station. It contained fifty-four of Federal rye whiskey. One bottle had been broken.

Upon calling at the express room to have his trunk, marked "Books," rechecked to a Massachusetts avenue address, Stefano Vacchiano, 16 years old, of Asbury Park, N. J., was arrested. He was held at the Sixth precinct station charged with transporting intoxicating liquor.

In removing the trunk from a train during the morning, a colored porter noticed liquor flowing from the bottom. Headquarters Detectives Nally and Billman ordered the trunk held.

POLICE RECOVER $16,000 SUITCASE

In Transfer of 19 Pieces of Luggage Valued One Strays Away.

The loss of a suitcase containing $16,000 in negotiable securities and $2,000 in jewelry by Miss Theresa Rooney, of San Francisco, Cal., who arrived in Washington yesterday morning to visit her sister, Mrs. Louis Titus, 1775 N street northwest, was cleared by police last night when they found the case hidden underneath a seat of a parlor car at the Union Station.

It is believed the case was stolen from several other pieces of baggage containing personal effects as Miss Rooney made her exit from the train. Following the finding, police placed a watch at the parlor car, but up to an early hour this morning no arrest was made.

The loss was not discovered until Miss Rooney arrived at the N street house. All of the other eighteen pieces of baggage were intact. Headquarters were notified, and Detective Nally and Billman conducted a vigorous investigation. The securities, according to Miss Rooney, could easily have been converted into cash. The jewelry comprised necklaces, watches, rings and other pieces.

Burglars Pass Up Drug Store Cash For Rum Supply

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Thieves broke into the store of Thieves Drug Company early today and stole $2,000 worth of alcohol and choice whiskey. That the thieves were after nothing but liquor is shown by the fact that they made no attempt to take any money, although there was more than $500 in cash on the desk, which they had to pass to reach the liquor. Drugs and perfumes of great value, earnings of cigarettes and boxes of good cigars were also ignored by the raiders.

Entrance was made through a steel door in the rear, which had been heavily barricaded with cross beams. More than 120 gallons of liquor was taken, including five cases of whiskey in pint bottles, one five-gallon can of whiskey, one barrel of fifty gallons, from which the contents were drawn into receptacles, more easily conveyable, and ten five-gallon cans of alcohol.

POVERTY-STRICKEN REFUGEES THROUG CAPITAL OF RUSSIA

Red Troops Control All
Activities of Hungry
Inhabitants.

By EDWIN W. HULLINGER.

MOSCOW, Oct. 29.—Our train rolled into Moscow one afternoon, and we alighted on a platform filled with refugees. Outside we saw what looked like an entire market, placed full of them, all with packs, colored shawls, and dirty handkerchiefs or the collar of their heads, with an occasional drowsy standing out here and there among the crowd.

It seemed as if a whole city full of fugitives were camped there in front of the beautiful Gothic station. This is a daily scene at train time.

Shouting and gesticulating, a dozen izvoshchiki (coachmen) started for me. After bargaining furiously a few minutes over the price, one of them held out his hat and all pitched their drivers' tags into it, bidding me to draw "as a newly arrived tavarishch (comrade) from America."

Ragged and Cold.

The driver, whose tag I drew, scooped for his horse and wagon. The aged porters, with the holes in their shoes stuffed with rags to keep the cold out, maneuvered our luggage upon the wagon. We—Herbert Pulitzer, of the New York World, an English newspaperman, and myself—climbed on top, and after the driver had distributed us about like balast to keep the outfit upright, we started off into the great capital of the world revolution.

We were unescorted. Our passports had been taken from us at the frontier. We had no means of identifying ourselves, if challenged by a Red guard.

One of the first vehicles we met was an armored motor tank, in which we could see the nodding helmets of a dozen Red guards.

Our route took us first through a deserted market zone, its long rows of bolted shop fronts presenting very much the appearance of the river market district of Chicago early in the morning when the meat trucks have just begun to circulate.

Red Guards Everywhere.
Occasionally the monotony was broken by the drab figure of a Red guard, his long overcoat flapping against his ankles, his drab helmet lighted up by the big red star of the revolution. These stolid soldiers of the revolution are everywhere, as much a part of the physical setting of Red Moscow as the drab buildings themselves, from which their uniforms seem to have taken their color.

They are a silent lot—phlegmatic, stolid, unreasoning, yet not overt bearing or hostile, mostly peasant boys, responsive to a pleasant smile or friendly word.

No street repair work has been done in Moscow since the revolution, and the cobblestone thoroughfares are pock-marked with jagged holes. Between ruts, we carried on a spasmodic conversation with our driver.

He was "no Bolshevik," he explained emphatically. Like the masses of all nations at all times, he cut his political creed according to the size of his bread ration. Bad bread means bad government, he reasoned.

Thought U. S. Soviet Too.
"Have you a Soviet republic in the United States, too?" he inquired eagerly.

He was surprised when I answered "no." He had thought every country "too Soviet."

The resuming of petty commercial life, following the government's recent decree permitting small trade, became increasingly evident as we neared the center of the city. Shop after shop, recently opened, broke the monotony of the long blocks of boarded-up window fronts. Apple women were bending over their stands.

We stopped in front of a hotel that seemed closed for the winter. The Savoy, one of the hostilities reserved for foreigners. The manager of the hotel, an earnest young proletarian, who may have been a plumber or machine-shop worker, was waiting for us.

Up to the command of the hotel, he was in charge of the civilian department—bellboys, chambermaids, porters, etc. The commander is responsible for the protection of the house and directly responsible to the Soviet government.

GETS FIVE MONTHS

Dabney Truett, 26 years old, of 2711 Ontario road northwest, who was arrested by Policemen Smith and Poole of the Sixth precinct on a charge of carrying a pistol, was sent to jail for five months yesterday by Judge McMahon in Police Court.

The policeman claimed that Truett carried the gun to a visit to the home of William McMillen, at 1433 T street northwest, and also to the home of Edna Brondy at 1443 T street. The accused is said to have told the police that he was hunting for his wife.

Says Mr. Wilson Will Stay Aloof From Conference

The United Press Association last night sent out the following, under the signature of Herbert W. Walker, one of the Washington staff:

Woodrow Wilson, one of the central figures at the great Versailles Peace Conference three years ago, has decided to remain completely aloof from the forthcoming limitation of armament conference.

The silence which the former President has maintained unbroken since he left the White House last March will be continued all through the arms conference, it was learned. In no way will he try to influence the delegates to the conference or impress his views regarding the league of nations or other world problems on anyone.

So anxious is the former President not to be accused of interfering in any way with the conference that he also has determined not to meet in a social way during the early part of the arms conference the principal delegates, several of whom are his close friends.

Princess Disdains Help in Climbing Into Black Maria

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The Princess Catherine Radziwill, very much against her will, rode from Coney Island to police court to Raymond street jail in Brooklyn in a prison van today, after she had been held in $500 bail on a charge of obtaining $255.55 worth of accommodations at the Hotel Shelburne, Coney Island, and failing to settle her bill.

Only a short time ago, the princess furnished $2,500 bail following her arrest on complaint resulting from a hotel bill.

Mamitt said at that time that he was convinced the woman, who is almost 60 years old, was really Princess Catherine Radziwill of Russia. She was booked as Catherine Dunvin and described herself as a journalist.

Her lawyer tried in vain today to persuade Magistrate O'Neill to allow her to remain in the Police court until a bondsman should arrive from Manhattan. The magistrate signed a commitment to jail, and Thomas Healy, driver of the prison van, stepped forward and put his hand on the arm of the princess. The princess drew away from him with a gesture of contempt.

"I can walk without your help," she said. "It is an outrage to compel a woman in my position to ride in such a vehicle."

She refused Healy's assistance again when he ventured to help her up the steep steps into the Black Maria. Later she was bailed out.

BOOKIES ARRESTED In 1920 PAY FINES

Harry E. Spafford and John T. Horgan, who were arrested in the raids on bookmakers on May 18, 1920, paid fines of $200 each yesterday in Police Court after pleading guilty. A sentence of thirty days each in jail was also imposed, but suspended on their promise to refrain from further violation of the law.

The police claimed that Spafford did business in a room at 1410 G street northwest, camouflaged as a real estate office. Horgan was arrested at 723 Twelfth street northwest. Betting slips, money and other bookmaking paraphernalia were seized by the police.

DISCOVERER OF 1909 SUGAR FRAUD DIES

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Richard Parr, who as special agent of the Department of Justice discovered the "sugar fraud" at this port in 1909, died today at the home of his brother, Harris Parr, in River de Drive, this city. Parr detected a wire device by which scales used in the weighing of sugar on wharves as it was unloaded from steamers were manipulated so as to make the apparent weight less than the real. On the evidence contained by Parr, the government sued refiners and recovered $2,500,000. Charles E. Heike, secretary of the American Sugar Refining Company, was found guilty of conspiracy and sentenced to eight months imprisonment and a fine of $5,000. Parr received $100,000 from the government for his work and was made deputy surveyor of the port. He retired about three years ago, after unearthing several notable smuggling cases.
